

For another course in my Information Technology major of an assignment I did that I felt was significant and learned a lot from, that would be AC-2768-1 HTML and Design of my semester project I did that involved creating a website of a certain kind of topic of our choice using a lot of the different HTML design elements, language, code, software, etc. that was learned throughout the course.

When it comes to how I did this assignment, that would be that the topic I ended up deciding on was to do an autobiography about myself where I first introduced myself with giving an overview of who I am along with saying what some of my hobbies are that I like to do in my free time as well with then going into detail talking about my favorite one out of them all. For what that one was, that would be traveling where I talked about a lot of the different places I have traveled to in my life up until that point with showing and talking about a lot of the different things I did and sights I saw with saying how they each made me feel personally.

For what I ended up learning from this assignment overall, that would be a lot of the different HTML design elements, code, language, software, etc. for creating websites and using all of that for creating a specific website designed around that of a certain particular topic.
